Foreword

A good GM (Games Master) is always looking for a little more extra detail when creating an environment around his players as the game progresses and grows, but sometimes this is easier said than done.

When players decide to search either the bodies of their slain enemies, or significant places during the game, usual item charts don't really cut the mustard when it comes to this added level of detail. It's either you find some great item or simply nothing at all, which is all well and good, but the savvy GM is missing out on that extra nugget of little detail that could add so much colour to the moments a PC has spent hunting around in the detritus.

Well, now you can give them a little reward for their efforts, albeit pointless, by a simple D100 roll on this chart. None of these items contained here will give advantage to a player, but some may make them laugh and possibly the clever GM will find some small hooks and adventure seeds that may tie into future developments in their games. It also may provide the GM with a nuisance player (you know the type) who is always searching everything for items of value, with a perfect foil and may make them think twice before scrounging through every nook and cranny, just take a D100 roll and allow them to find all sorts of crap until they give up and get on with the game in more constructive way!!

Most items here represent stuff which could be carried around or hidden in small areas out of sight, therefore are ideal for the situations after combat encounters, empty rooms and so forth. Useless? Well, yes maybe, but interesting tasters of random filler? Definitely!! Enjoy adding these things into your games!
