Ship Names for the Whole Fleet

Every good ship needs a strong name, in fact, it's bad luck to sail a ship that doesn't have a name or to rename a ship that has already sailed. Besides what is the party's lookout going to yell when their arch nemesis comes into view - "Bad ship off the port side?" For this reason, and because giving names to your world's ships makes it feel more like a living world, your friends here at Healing Fireball Publications have created a group of tables suitable for naming all the ships in your world. From the darkest pirate vessel to the traders just trying to make a living to the stout military vessels defending their borders, you will find a name to suit all your needs.

A Note about Ship prefixes

Many ships have a prefix before their names that designate their propulsion type (SS for steam ship), their purpose (RV for research vessels) or their military affiliation (USS for United States Navy Ships). The tables in this product do not contain these designators so as to make them as generic as possible. However, if you intend to add these prefixes to your ships, it is important to know that they come before the ship's proper name and that on names that contain the word "The" at the front, this "The" is often replaced with the appropriate prefix, for example, The Black Tide would become SS Black Tide. Below is a short list of common prefixes that might be useful.

Common Ship Prefixes

Propulsion Type: SS – Steamship SV – Sailing Vessel GTS – Gas Turbine Ship
MS – Motor Ship PS – Paddle Steamer NS – Nuclear Ship

Ship's Purpose: CRV – Costal Research Vessel DSV – Diving Support Vessel/Deep Submergence Vehicle
FV – Fishing Vessel LB – Life Boat MF – Motor Ferry RV – Research Vessel RMS – Royal Mail Ship

Naval Affiliation: CNS – Commonwealth Naval Ship HMS – Her/His Majesty's Ship
