How to Use this Book

Welcome to the third book in my series of random 1D100 tables.

A game master can never have enough random tables. Random tables eliminate preparation time and open up story options that would have never been explored otherwise.

Flip to the table that best fits your game situation and roll the dice. Or better yet, have your players roll.

This book is divided into five sections: Names, Encounters & Locations, Items & Things, Food & Drink, and Epitaphs, Quests, & Dungeon Effects.

The names section includes names of inns, which is always helpful, and names of knightly orders. The names of knightly orders can be used to people your world with interesting encounters and historical information a real world would have.

You always need encounters, so the Encounters & Locations section was created to provide a broad range of options for you while you are running your game.

The Items & Things section has plenty of items that can be found in chests, cells, or even a wine cellar.

Food and drink can always be tricky. On one hand you want to add realism, but on the other hand, you don't want to get bogged down in trivialities. These random tables help you add a touch of realism without going too far into the weeds. Plus the beer table is simply a lot of fun.

The last section contains a few unique tables. The Epitaphs table is perfect for characters searching graveyards or catacombs. The Thieves Guild quests are adventures or even campaigns in a few sentences. The Dungeon Health Effects table allows game masters to add extra danger to exploring dungeons.

Don't spend hours prepping your session. Take these random tables and create unique and engaging adventures on the fly.
